Summertime means more farm machinery on SC highways

Hugh Weathers, South Carolina's Commissioner of Agriculture, urges drivers to use caution when driving near tractors and other large farm equipment on the highways around the state.

Each spring and summer there is an increase of tractors and other large farm machines that travel South Carolina's back roads as farmers work their fields. Every year there are collisions involving farm equipment and vehicles across the state and the Department of Agriculture encourages everyone to drive with care as they approach any farm machine on the road.

"Tractors and combines on the roads are a part of South Carolina," Weathers said. "I urge all drivers to slow down, be patient behind large tractors that may be driving slowly, and pass with care."

Eat Smart - Buy South Carolina Grown

What's your favorite color? Red, yellow, orange, green, blue, purple, white? Pick a little color for your plate. It's the season to buy South Carolina grown. Watermelons, beans, tomatoes, cantaloupes, peaches, squash, eggplant, sweet corn . . . the list of fresh produce available during South Carolina's peak summer produce season is endless.

Try eating a diet rich in colorful fruits and vegetables. The potential benefits associated with eating more fruits and vegetables stack up quickly. Reducing your risk of certain chronic diseases is only the beginning.

And don't forget to Move More while you Eat Smart. The SC Eat Smart, Move More partnership supports healthy eating and active living where South Carolinians live, learn, work and play. Eat Smart Move More. Get up. Get out. Visit <http://eatsmartmovemoresc.org/> for 7 Healthy Habits.

Enjoy locally grown fruits and vegetables. The time is right to find your favorite color at the nearest supermarket, roadside market, or farmers market.

Look for the Certified SC Grown logo. Buy South Carolina. Nothing's fresher. Nothing's finer.

USC equestrian team racks up awards

The University of South Carolina's equestrian team has again achieved success in both the equine and academic arenas.

Senior Kristen Terebesi won the 2008 individual national championship in equitation on the flat and equitation over fences to become the first person to win more than one individual championship in the same season.

Terebesi is also one of seventeen equestrian team members that were named to the Southeastern Conference's Spring Academic Honor Roll. In the five years since equestrian has been included in the SEC Spring Honor Roll listings, Coach Boo Duncan has placed 76 student-athletes on the list, averaging 15.2 selections per year. To be eligible, each student-athlete must have a GPA of 3.00, be on scholarship, a letter winner or have participated on a varsity team for two years if non-scholarship.

Power at the Pump for Buyers and Sellers

We all know about the pain at the pump, from the rising price at the pump and its affect on our pocketbooks. As gas prices have gone up, so have the number complaints to the Consumer Services Division here at the Department of Agriculture. In an average month we receive around fifty complaints from the public about inaccuracies at the pump. In May the number tripled to nearly one fifty.

We take each complaint seriously and our job is to ensure that when you pull up to the pump, you get your money's worth. At $4 a gallon I know that's debatable! Our twenty inspectors fan out to inspect over 64,000 gas dispensers across the state. The goal is for our inspectors to visit each service station at least every twelve months. We show up unannounced so that we inspect a typical operation. When I am asked my response is usually 'we don't set 'em...we just check 'em.' What we do is ensure that you receive a quality fuel product and when you buy a gallon of gas-that's exactly what you get.

Many of the complaints received are from people who believe they received less gas than for what they paid. Carol Fulmer, Director of Consumer Services, says last year our inspectors found that 1.7 % of the state's dispensers were out of compliance. What does that mean for you? Well, it may mean that the dispenser is either giving out too little or too much gas. About two-thirds of the errors we find are actually in the consumers' favor.

Normally, what we do at an inspection is not exactly newsworthy. $4 a gallon has changed that. We held a demonstration last week in Columbia for the media. Four television stations, two newspapers, and one radio station covered the event.

During an inspection, the inspector visually inspects the pumps to ensure the octane levels and prices are clearly labeled. The inspector pumps fuel into a special calibrated, stainless steel container called a "prover." When the prover is level, the inspector takes the nozzle from the pump and watches to make sure there is no gasoline in the line. Then, he (or she) pumps precisely five gallons by the reading on the pump. The measurement on the prover should match the measurement on the pump within standardized tolerance levels. If the pump is slightly out of tolerance, the station is given ten days to get the device repaired. If the pump is out more than twice the allowed tolerance, the inspector stops sale until the correction is made. The inspector then returns the five gallons to the storage tank.

To ensure that the fuel is not contaminated with water, the inspector applies a special water-finding paste to a yardstick attached to a rope that is lowered into the storage tank. The paste will change from yellow to red if water is present in the tank. If he sees that the paste does not change color, he knows that there is no water in the storage tank.

After the pump is checked for measurement accuracy and for water contamination, the inspector draws a sample of fuel to take back to the Department's Petroleum Lab to test for other contaminants and to ensure accuracy of octane labeling on the pump. During the year we test an average of 3,000 random fuel samples at our lab in Columbia. The lab technicians look for a variety of things including water and sediment in the fuels and octane. We also test kerosene, diesel, and other petroleum products like antifreeze. And we also look to see if fuels have inadvertently been mixed.

Our inspectors cover a lot of ground during the year to ensure consumers are getting the most bang for their buck - or, in this case, four bucks - and I am proud of the work they do. They'll be out there in ninety-five degrees for a while, so, if one sees an inspector on the job, tell them you appreciate it.

Lately there have been a lot of reports of people letting their tanks go to "E" and continuing to drive trying to squeeze a few extra miles before heading in for that painful pump experience. If you're looking to save a few dollars and not visit the pump as frequently, one of the best ways is to ease off the pedal.

I have been trying to 'survive at sixty-five' on the interstate, and, most of the time, I still get to where I'm going on-time.

If you think there is a problem at a pump you used, give us a call. To report a problem, call the Consumer Services Division at 803-737-9690. Make sure to provide the name and location of the station and the pump number that you suspect has a problem. Look on the inspection sticker on the pump that tells you the last time the dispenser was inspected. If it's much more than a year old, let us know.

The South Carolina Department of Agriculture Consumer Services inspectors are working to give buyers and sellers, consumers and station owners and managers, more power at the pump!

Boiled peanuts - a heart-healthy snack

It's been called the Caviar of the South, but boiled peanuts, South Carolina's official state snack, may be as healthy as they are delicious. Lloyd Walker, a researcher at Alabama A&M University, reports boiling peanuts packs them with more antioxidants than roasted peanuts or peanut butter.

Peanuts are usually consumed as processed products, mainly as peanut butter and roasted nuts. Studies have shown that peanuts contain powerful antioxidants called isoflavones which may reduce the risk of cancer, diabetes and coronary heart diseases. Although the effect of processing on the isoflavone content of legumes has been extensively studied, but there has never been such a study on peanuts.

Walker and his colleagues evaluated the effect of boiling and oil- and dry-roasting on peanuts. They found that boiled peanuts contained up to four times more isoflavones than raw peanuts or oil- and dry-roasted ones. For more information about the state's peanut industry, contact Brad Boozer, 803-734-2200.

The South Carolina Department of Public Safety offers these tips when driving near large farm equipment on the highway:

- Don't follow too close. Driving too close reduces reaction time.

- Slow done when approaching farm machinery on the road. Large pieces of equipment drive slower than most people think.

- Pass with caution and use good sight distance. Remember tractors and combines are wider than standard vehicles.

For more information on safety tips, please contact Sgt. Kelley Hughes, community relations officer with the South Carolina Highway Patrol, 803-896-8164.

"Coach Duncan and her staff do an incredible job," said Mary Ellen Tobias, Equine Marketing Specialist with the South Carolina Department of Agriculture.

"The student-athletes at USC should be commended for all of their hard work."

In the past four years the Gamecock Equestrian team has advanced to the Varsity Equestrian National Championships each year and won the overall title in 2005 and 2007. The Hunter Seat team won the national championship each year from 2005 through 2007.

Celebrate July Ice Cream Month!

Weathers Family Vanilla Custard Peach Ice Cream

Peel and dice 3 cups of very ripe peaches. Set aside.

2 cups whole milk
8 egg yolks
3/4 cups sugar
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/4 cup (2 ounces) vanilla extract
2 cups whipping cream

Cook milk in heavy saucepan over medium heat, stirring often, just until bubbles appear; remove from heat. Wisk together yolks and next 3 ingredients in a large bowl until thick and pale. Gradually whisk warm milk mixture into yolk mixture; return to saucepan. Cook over very low heat, stirring constantly, 5 minutes or until mixture thickens and coats a spoon. Remove from heat; pour through a wiremesh strainer into a bowl. Cool, stirring occasionally. Stir in cream and mashed peaches; cover and chill at least 1 hour. Pour mixture into freezer container of a 1-gallon churn and freeze. Pack freezer with additional ice and rock salt and let stand 1 hour before serving.
